Sewage pipelines abandoned on EB Road

By N Rathi Chithra

Sewage pipelines procured many months ago have been abandoned on the platform as well as the roadside on the Electricity Board Road in Mogappair East.

"These huge pipes were unloaded here at least a year ago. The workers then said they would be used for laying underground sewage lines in the locality. But the workers have not been seen for many months now," says Chandrasekar, a security guard of an apartment on EB Road. "There is no trace of anyone clearing them or putting them to use for the purpose they were brought here. Now no body is able to use the platform and the huge pipes have added to the chaos. At nights it becomes difficult to spot these pipelines on the road," says Gandiban, who rides a scooter on the stretch daily to commute to his workplace. "It becomes difficult for car drivers to take a 'U' Turn as they have to run the risk of dashing against the boulders," says local resident Vasudevan. A senior citizen, Moorthy, who retired from Central Government service, says these pipelines have been exposed to vagaries of nature and also become a hiding place for rodents. "Look at it, this also points to how public money is wasted. On the one hand the treasury does not have enough funds for carrying out developmental works and on the other hand pipelines purchased at such huge costs have been simply abandoned here. This is wasteful expenditure and someone should be held accountable for such lapses," he laments. A local shopkeeper, Ya-

and the huge pipes have added to the chaos. At nights it becomes difficult to spot these pipelines on the road," says Gandiban, who rides a scooter on the stretch daily to commute to his workplace. "It becomes difficult for car drivers to take a 'U' Turn as they have to run the risk of dashing against the boulders," says local resident Vasudevan. A senior citizen, Moorthy, who retired from Central Government service, says these pipelines have been exposed to vagaries of nature and also become a hiding place for rodents. "Look at it, this also points to how public money is wasted. On the one hand the treasury does not have enough funds for carrying out developmental works and on the other hand pipelines purchased at such huge costs have been simply abandoned here. This is wasteful expenditure and someone should be held accountable for such lapses," he laments. A local shopkeeper, Yasodha, recalls that these pipelines were unloaded over a year ago before the new roads on this stretch were laid. "The workers had told us that sewage pipelines would be laid here. But by then the Corporation of Chennai had laid the new tar road on this stretch. We suspect that since they would have had to dig the roads, they simply abandoned the project or perhaps these pipelines were bought in excess," she says.

Revival in demand for earthenware

By N Rathi Chithra

In the age of dishwashers and electric stoves, there is a slow but steady revival of demand for earthenware in urban pockets. With stress on ancient wisdom and increased awareness on the benefits of traditional cooking, people are trying out their hand at preparing foods in earthenware.

The gaining popularity of vessels made of clay could be seen in and around Mogappair where at least three sellers are dealing with earthenware on a daily basis. "Demand for clay pots and other kitchen wares made of clay has increased considerably. But there are not many artisans who are adept at making these wares," says Saravanan, a 25-year-old vendor who displays his wares on the platform at Collector Nagar.

"It is very difficult to procure the kaliman (loose clay) these days. We take mud from the banks of the lake after getting permission from the respective District Collectors. But we get the permission only once a year due to restriction on sand mining along river banks," he explains. Saravanan brings the finished products from Manamadurai and Poonamallee.

According to him, using earthen vessels help to control heat in the body. "Drinking refrigerated water could get you a flu but chilled water from the mud pot would help to balance the body heat and the water also is tastier," he says. Gravy cooked in earthen vessels also enhances its taste, particularly that of fish curry, he says adding even the rice tastes better.

Raji, who sells these wares near the Mogappair East Bus Depot, claims that many doctors purchase the mud products from him. "These products have become trendy now. People also have started liking the natural way of life and that's why everything organic makes a big hit," he says.

He sources the earthenware from Periyapalayam. "I sell at least five to six pots everyday. We hire pot makers from Manamadurai to make these wares and pay them Rs 700 per day. It has become difficult to procure raw materials such as savukku kattai, thenna koodai and vaikol (hay) to make and preserve these products.

The transport cost has also gone up," he says. Among his popular items are clay water jug and cups. He sells products worth around Rs 1,500 daily. Another potter sells his wares on Church Street.

Bus shelters needed in Mogappair East

By Our Correspondent
Commuters waiting to board a bus at two Metropolitan Transport Corporation (MTC) stops in Mogappair East are put to hardship during summer as well as winter due to the absence of bus shelters.

With the dog days already on, commuters including women and children sweat it out at the Velammal School Bus Stop and the J J Nagar Police Station Bus Stop standing in the open. "There was a bus shelter at the Velammal Bus Stop more than 10 years ago. After the dilapidated structure was pulled down, there has been no attempt to build a new shelter. Now we have to sweat it out or get drenched during rains while waiting for the bus," says Shambu Shastri, an elderly commuter, who is a temple priest.

Local residents do not recall spotting a bus shelter at the Police Station Bus Stop for at least two decades. "We have to stand on the roadside. In the mornings it is pathetic as school-going children have to wait with their bag loads with no place to sit. It is strange that the authorities concerned have constructed good bus shelters at the Eri Scheme Bus Stop, which is less frequented but ignored the Velammal and Police Station bus stops where hundreds of commuters wait on weekdays," points out Ravindran, a middle-aged commuter.

"We have got used to this. But during the peak hours when many commuters occupy the road fringes, it makes it difficult for motorists to negotiate traffic," says Salman, an office-goer.

Malliga, a regular commuter says, "The new visitors will not even know that there are bus stops here as there are not even a board in place. We travel regularly so we are familiar with the stops. We can see many people waiting in JJ Nagar Police station bus stop under the sun." Presently, some commuters stand underneath the sunshades of commercial establishments and houses nearby whenever it rains. "Considering that bus shelters are essential amenity, the Corporation of Chennai or MTC must come forward to construct bus shelters at these places," demands Karthikayini, a college student and regular commuter.
